Didactic Situations Aimed at the Formation of Creative Activity in Primary School Students and the Principles of their Choice

Turaxo'jayeve Adibahan, Komilova Faragat

Candidate of Philosophy, Docent of the KSPI, Uzbekistan

Master of the 2nd stage, Uzbekistan

To show creative activity, cognitive, that is, the ability to think independently, is of particular importance. In order to accelerate the analytical activities of students, the following situations were organized:

1. Assessment and self-assessment situation. This necessitates the analysis and verification of the activities of the participants in the educational process. The use of evidence in defense of decisions made ensures the emergence of experiences necessary for self-realization, knowledge of one's own essence. The essence of such situations lies in the fact that the reader, having created some kind of novelty, feels its uniqueness for himself, feels a sense of satisfaction from it, as a result of which he creates some kind of novelty. In order to innovate, learn to create, students need to have their own point of view, abandon thinking in one mold, realize its importance for them to show their creative activity.

2. "Brainstorming" situation. In order to understand correctly, it is important for the formation of creative activity in students, such as Team analysis of problem tasks, finding alternative solutions to these tasks, encouraging students who have found such solutions, assessing the quality of responses given by students, critical assessment of ideas. Based on the total amount of answers, the correct answers will also increase.

3. Selection situation. The content of the selection situation includes the analysis of ways to achieve success, conducting inspections, using the experience of overcoming difficulties in the process of performing educational tasks, abandoning activities and actions in one mold.

4. Exercise situation. In such situations, various options for pedagogical actions are considered. They can include the situation of competition, game situations, dialogues, cooperation and work together, situations of equal distribution of tasks, the situation of motivation to succeed, the situation of cooperation with creative students.

5. A situation of entry into the world of values. In the process, readers, on the basis of acquaintance with historical reality, master the values, traditions of the Uzbek people, the experiences of our ancestors and examples of creativity, draw inspiration from it, and they themselves strive to invest their strength in creativity.

6. Situation in search of solutions to problems. In the process, students face various difficulties as subjects of activity, cannot immediately respond to these problems, and the search for answers to such problems requires intellectual creative activity from students. In the process, the skills of not being shy about making mistakes, putting an end to the situations of fear in students, are composed. Thanks to this, they acquire a high level of creative activity. The main essence of such situations is that as a result of their independent determination of logical connections, a number of innovations arise.

7. The situation of searching for basic logic. The basis for the formation of the skill of inspecting old ideas about the educational process, accelerating the process of logical research, the emergence of internal pressure, the search for the logic of educational activities.

Of particular importance in the educational process is given by the fact that the third and fourth types of situations are aimed at accelerating educational actions, referring to the purpose of creating the first and second types of educational situations mentioned above, accelerating the analytical activities of students. And the fifth, sixth and seventh situations serve to accelerate the personal analytical activity of students.
